

China's New Leadership and the World

A Public Forum Commemorating East Asian Institute's 15th Anniversary

Co-sponsored by Saw Swee Hock and Lee Foundation

Wednesday, 24 October 2012

Regent Singapore · Level 1 · Royal Pavilion Ballroom

Tentative Programme

The year 2012 marks the 15th anniversary of the East Asian Institute (EAI), an autonomous research institute within the National University of Singapore dedicated to the study and understanding of contemporary China and its neighbours. This year is also pivotal in the political calendar of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), which will convene its crucial 18th Party Congress to formalise China's top leadership transition. A new generation of younger leaders led by Xi Jinping is set to take over the reins of power from Hu Jintao. This important leadership transition is to take place at a time when China is politically and economically poised to become an emerging global power.

However, with the recent Bo Xilai affair along with the slowdown of China's economic growth, the leadership transition this time no longer looks to be as routine as originally thought. China's leadership, both old and new, will be facing challenges from many fronts.

To celebrate the anniversary, EAI is organising a public forum with a panel of distinguished scholars speaking on these challenges and their implications for the region.

China's 18th Party Congress: New Leaders, New Direction

An International Conference Commemorating
East Asian Institute's 15th Anniversary

Co-sponsored by Saw Swee Hock and Lee Foundation

24 – 25 October 2012
(Wednesday & Thursday)

Orchard Hotel • Level 3 • Ballroom 1

The year 2012 marks the 15th anniversary of the East Asian Institute (EAI), an autonomous research institute within the National University of Singapore dedicated to the study and understanding of contemporary China and its neighbours. This year is also pivotal in the political calendar of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), which will convene its crucial 18th Party Congress to formalise China's top leadership transition. A new generation of younger leaders led by Xi Jinping is set to take over the reins of power from Hu Jintao.

To celebrate the anniversary, EAI is organising an international conference for eminent scholars to examine China's new leadership line-up and its new policy direction, particularly in regard to how it will address the manifold challenges confronting China, and pave the way for the country to become the world's largest economy within two decades. Building on the basis of his predecessor, Xi and his team are expected to face increasing expectations to bring China to a higher level of development: combining economic growth with social harmony, environmental sustainability and even political liberalisation with greater transparency as well as accountability. But the recent Bo Xilai affair has brought in new elements of uncertainty. How they manage this process will have implications for not only China's trajectory of growth but also the stability of the region, if not the rest of the world.

At this conference, six panels will analyse the potential transformation of the Party leadership, state and society, patterns of economic growth, and international relations in the following four key areas: (1) Top leadership transition and its implications for the Party and governance; (2) Sustainable economic growth that is socially more inclusive and environment-friendly; (3) Coping with rapid social changes and urbanisation, and the government's new policy for "social management"; and (4) Regional and international challenges from a rising China.
