

CHINA

an international journal

volume 2, number 2
September 2004

EAST ASIAN INSTITUTE
National University of Singapore

published by Singapore University Press & World Scientific

contents

research

The Party Elite and China's Trajectory of Change

The political and social changes that have occurred in China since 1989 are quite different from those which have occurred in other post-communist regimes. Exactly how political participation might broaden remains unclear, but stable evolutionary change is a real possibility.

by Andrew G. WALDER 189

Civil Service Reform in China, 1993–2001: A Case of Implementation Failure

China's civil service reform programme was aimed at institutionalising the principles of merit, competition, fairness and transparency in staffing, performance appraisal and compensation. The response of different levels of government varied.

by Bill K.P. CHOU 210

Implementing and Avoiding Control: Contemporary Art and the Chinese State

Contemporary artists in China seek to improve the environment for artistic creation and publicity. Horizontal linking has compensated for the inability to rely on the resources and opportunities distributed through the state-run artist organisations.

by Taru SALMENKARI 235

SARS: "Waterloo" of Chinese Science

With the first, and eventually largest number of SARS cases, the Chinese scientific community should have been the first to determine the nature of the pathogen, sequence its genome and establish how this lethal disease was being transmitted.

by Cong CAO 262

International Security Challenges Posed by HIV/AIDS: Implications for China

The Chinese government finally recognises HIV/AIDS as a potential threat to national security. Its military is training and deploying abroad, tourists are arriving by the thousands and workers throughout the country are moving around as never before.

by Andrew THOMPSON 287

comments and notes

The Fourth Rise of China: Cultural Implications

The Chinese have a deep-rooted ancient culture of values, but are now tending to opt for secular alternatives coming directly or indirectly from the West. Whilst China is itself struggling to come to terms with these, its influence in the region is more likely to be felt in terms of its political and economic cultures than its culture of values.

by WANG Gungwu 311

What Do Workers Want in China's Industrial Workplace?

Do Chinese workers, after three decades of central planning typically seek the same job security, egalitarian compensation, participation in decision-making, rule enforcement, factory welfare, etc., that their counterparts around the world demand?

by HE Gaochao 323

Taiwan's Dangwai Strategy: Its Implications for Mainland China

Taiwan's independence issue is now being used as a strategic weapon against the Chinese Communist Party, with the awareness that the Party has a current membership of some 66 million and is a much more formidable and ruthless opponent.

by Peter Kien-hong YU 330

China-ASEAN relations

Chronology of Events: October 2003 to March 2004

compiled by YOW Cheun Hoe 343

Documents

compiled by YOW Cheun Hoe 356

Joint Ministerial Statement of the ASEAN+3 Finance Ministers Meeting

Joint Media Statement of the 6th ASEAN Economic Ministers and the Ministers of PRC, Japan and Republic of Korea Consultation (AEM+3)

China's Development and Asia's Rejuvenation

Protocol to Amend the Framework Agreement on Comprehensive Economic Cooperation between ASEAN and PRC

Press Statement of the Chairperson of the ASEAN + China Summit, the ASEAN + Japan Summit, the ASEAN + Republic of Korea Summit and the ASEAN-India Summit

Joint Declaration of the Heads of State/Government of ASEAN and PRC on Strategic Partnership for Peace and Prosperity

Instrument of Extension of the Treaty of Amity and Cooperation in Southeast Asia to China

China's Accession to the Treaty of Amity and Cooperation in Southeast Asia by China

Towards an ASEAN Single Market and Single Investment Destination

EAI mission

To promote both academic and policy-oriented research on East Asian development, particularly the political, economic and social development of contemporary China (including Hong Kong and Taiwan), and its growing economic integration with the world and the political and security implications for the region.